

Grasping anthropology – Guided tour

A SEA OF ISLANDS

5 August 2020, 18:00 - 19:30 PM

The Pacific Ocean features countless, seemingly isolated islands and atolls. They have brought forth cultures that do not perceive the sea as a separating barrier but as a connecting space, providing many opportunities for communication and exchange. On this guided tour we try to think our way into this different understanding of geography with help of exhibited objects from the Pacific. With us in spirit is the writer and ethnographer Epeli Hau'ofa who came up with this new approach of viewing Oceania as a sea of islands.
